Dear Parents/Carers

RE: Behaviour rewards and consequences

The children have settled back in to school so well this week. We have all had lots of new routines to adapt too, but as the week has gone on, each day has got that little bit easier. I wanted to write to you today to remind you of the behavior and rewards process we follow.

Rewards

We are proud to reward our students for making the right decisions, displaying positive behaviours such as being resilient, determined, kind or having a good attitude to learning. We reward our students with Bromcom points.

Students are given a 'pay slip' every week so they can see how many points they have earned, and each year group has the opportunity to attend the NUSA 'swap shop' at the end of each half term, where they can exchange positive points for prizes. Prizes include chocolate, stationary, sports equipment and £10 vouchers.

Consequences

Unfortunately, there are times when students make the wrong decisions and behave in a way that goes against our behaviour policy. Although our first aim is always to correct student's poor behavior, in some occasions this will lead to a consequence. We have an established set of predetermined consequences.

In a situation where a student's behaviour is significantly disrupting the learning of others, and they have refused to follow correction, they will be issued with a 'Red Flag', removed from the classroom and placed in Isolation (ICE) for the remainder of that lesson. This ensures the learning of other student's in the classroom.

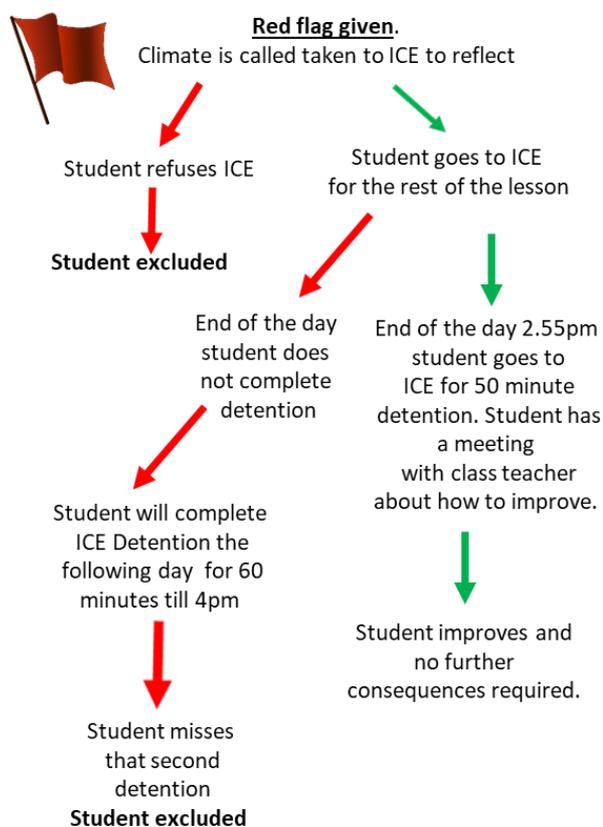

Where a student has been issued a red flag, the parents/carer will be informed via text message that their child will sit a compulsory red flag detention for 50 minutes after school, ending at 3:45pm. The classroom teacher will also contact the parents to explain the circumstances leading to the issue of a red flag and what improvements can be made by the student. The classroom teacher will also discuss this with the student at the start of the red flag detention.

Any students that fail to attend a red flag detention will sit a 60 minutes red flag detention on the following day. Failure to comply with this procedure will result in a fixed term exclusion.

In the event that a student receives two red flags within one week, they will be required to attend a reset session on Monday morning where the behaviour issues will be addressed.

In the event that a student receives three red flags within one week, they will either receive a fixed term exclusion or be placed at another school for the period of the fixed term exclusion.

Below is a visual guide of NUSA's red flag procedure, which all our students should be familiar with;
